I remember bits and pieces of being the flower girl in their wedding 45 yrs ago and never knowing him without Angie. I never went to their house, which out of 7 days, it had to have been at 5 or 6 times a week, they would say that many times was per day I am sure of it, and they were together laughing, talking without a care in the world.

To me, they were one another's soulmates still after 45 years, through the good times, hardships, misunderstandings, loss of family members over the years, they still came out on top!

I remember when they started church, took their marriage to another level, and added the third part which made them who they are today.

They both were on fire for the Lord; it was seen with the fruit in which they bared.

Angie, I can't imagine the pain of losing your best friend, spouse, and soulmate all at once, but at least you can have the peace of knowing he is resting with our Father in which has made a place for all those who has accepted the blood of Jesus.
